A JAMAICAN'S VIEW.

The Swettenham-Davis tableau which was put on immediately after the Kingston earthquake, developed into an international question. Much speculation was indulged in as to whether Admiral Davis was hasty, repulsive and insulting in his offered aid to the sufferers, or whether Gov. Swettenham, of Jamaica, was too autocratic, arrogant and high-spirited. The papers and magazines of all nations have indulged at length in reviews of the incident and some opinions have been rendered. None, however, have appeared in the columns of local papers as coming directly from Jamaica. A Globe representative, who is personally acquainted with many people in Jamaica, opened correspondence with well-informed British subjects in this island, seeking just the exact attitude taken by the Jamaicans with regard to Davis' actions and Swettenham's resentment. He gives his views in the following letter:

"I have followed the Swettenham-Davis incident. Hard to give an unbiased opinion from newspaper reports. Swettenham may have been right; Davis, ditto. One thing is certain, that in all foreign countries, as a rule, Americans are recognized for their wealth and liberality, but from the standpoint of being polished gentlemen and ladies, they are still in the backwoods of civilization. They cling too persistently to petty prejudices, yet claiming to be republicans. This is meant in a general way, of course; there are many exceptions to the rule."

It can be seen from the foregoing that many Americans instead of making friends with foreigners in their own country leave the wrong impression. It has often been said that because of the American's wealth and their opportunities to accumulate wealth in a day, they take the position as dictator or czar. It is seldom recorded where Americans go in with a real charitable intention, as in the case just mentioned. Some parts of the letter just quoted, it is said by the recipient of the letter, will show that Admiral Davis attempted to take charge of the island without recognizing the governor and the other colonial officers. It is said he landed marines, established stores and supplies and began to issue orders without recognizing the British flag. These subjects of the King are as loyal to their flag as the Americans can ever be. They feel a pride in being called British subjects. No apology in the form of an apology has been made. Only official notes have been passed.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

An Oratorio Presented by Walden University in the Meharry Auditorium.

An appreciative audience that was and could be called a large audience, considering the extremely inclement weather, filled the spacious auditorium at Meharry Medical College last Friday night, March 1st, to witness "The Prodigal Son," which was presented to the music lovers in the form of an oratorio. This beautiful and well-rendered entertainment was under the management of Miss Mamie E. Braden, musical director of Walden University, and daughter of the late and beloved Dr. Braden, the ex-president of Walden. Miss Braden is an ardent worker, tireless and unswerving in her devotion and efforts in everything that will interest Walden University.

The program for the evening was one highly entertaining. It took on the professional air. The performance was to begin at 8 p. m., but a gale was blowing at the hour that marked the advent of March, and in this high gale the rain was coming down in torrents, yet many braved the storm and at 8:30 the Walden Orchestra began with a beautiful selection. Then the chorus, consisting of about fifty voices, arranged twenty-five to each side of the stage, in costumes that were catchy and becoming, furnished a fine selection. The orchestra again played and the chorus began the first strains of the oratorio, "The Prodigal Son." There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth. The well-trained voices and the way in which the grand composition was rendered, appealed to the very hearts of the hearers. Those present leaned far over in their seats to catch the pronunciation of every word. At the conclusion the chorus was loudly applauded.

The soloists were Miss Maud J. Roberts, soprano, who is recognized as one of the leading soprano singers in the city, and indeed on Friday night she sustained this reputation with a clear, sweet, musical voice that was well-controlled, she rendered her parts, exciting a continuous applause on each appearance. Mrs. Laura P. Allen, the contralto, can be said to be next to Mrs. John Work. She showed wonderful ability as a contralto singer. At the end of her selection the audience showed their approval by hearty applause. Mr. W. T. Durroh, the tenor soloist, gave a specimen of what a well-trained tenor could accomplish in high class music. While his articulation was not distinct, his voice was well-cultured, and at each appearance he showed improvement. Mr. Beauchamp Landry, in taking the bass solo part, made good. His singing was of the highest class, and especially did he render, "And he arose and came to his father," in a pleasing manner.

No audience has enjoyed a better musical than the one at Meharry last Friday night. The choral society that took part in the recital was a host of well-trained voices. Special mention can be made of the orchestra. Each musician showed the training of professionals.

AN EASTER PROGRAM.

The Globe wishes to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of the Easter Greeting or Easter Exercises that are being sent out by the National Baptist Publishing Board. These beautiful Easter exercises excel anything that we have seen, and this is shown both in its artistic design and workmanship and beautiful colors of blended purple and green, and also the artistic Easter lilies and other designs in pleasing colors. The Responsive Scripture Reading, Easter Songs, Recitations and Poems are in every way in keeping with the best cultivated taste. We think that every church and Sunday school regardless of denomination should see and examine copies of these Exercises before purchasing elsewhere. There is nothing in these exercises of a denominational nature, but it is indeed a cantata of the most bright and sparkling gems of music.

Eason, Eugene Clayton, and Thos. A. Ewing. Misses John D. Blackwell, Bettie Warren, Annie Cheek and Willie M. Turner, Messrs. Guy Bodenhammer, John T. Risher, R. G. Johnson, James M.
